GENERAL GRANT.

The following reports, extracted from the local papers, are republished for general information.

By Command,

W. H. Marsh, Colonial Secretary.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Hongkong, 13th May, 1879.

At a Dinner and Reception at Government House on the 3rd of May, after the toast of the "Her Majesty the Queen," which was duly honoured in the usual way, the band playing "God Save the Queen"—

His Excellency said:—The Governor of this Colony has from time to time had the privilege of welcoming, in the name of the whole community, distinguished visitors. One of the children of our Queen has been residing in this house, and my immediate predecessor entertained here a son of the Emperor of Russia. But I believe the young princes would be themselves among the first to say that the man whose health one in this Colony, I thank him for giving us this opportunity of showing him that we all appreciate his character and career. Will you forgive me, ladies and gentlemen, if I presume to add that there are one or two personal reasons also why it affords me peculiar pleasure to see General Grant at my table. During the whole of those ever-memorable years, from the day when he drilled his company of volunteers at Galena, to the capture of Richmond and the surrender of the rebel army, I was in a small way mixed up in public affairs in England, as a member of that assembly, the power of which, for good or evil, is not confined within the bounds of England's Sovereignty. It is now a matter of history that in both Houses of the British Parliament there were friends and foes of Freedom, but we may recall with pride the fact that two men so diverse in person and disposition and party relations as John Bright and Benjamin Disraeli, were sagacious enough to know that the honour of their own Country and the welfare of the World were associated with the cause for which Ulysses Grant was contending. Whilst Bright was repairing the blunders of one or two eminent men of the Liberal party, the great Conservative Chief was, to my own personal knowledge, labouring night and day to counteract unreasoning prejudice amongst his own followers, and it is ever to me a source of intense satisfaction that, though in a very humble way no doubt, I was one of those members of the House of Commons who loyally supported his prudent and patriotic policy. But this is not the only personal reason that is present to my mind to-night. I am a citizen of Cork. I come from that corner of the Old World nearest, and not least dear, to the United States; and on behalf of my fellow citizens I now as sure General GRANT that in no part of the civilised globe would he have received a heartier welcome, if he had honoured us with a visit, than in my native city. I now invite you to drink his health, and

I am now about to propose, is the most illustrious guest that ever sat at this table. I do not refer so much to the military achievements which will for ever rank the name of Ulysses Grant with those of Washington, Wellington, and Napo-

LEON, but to those other achievements, indicated by Lord Beaconsfield, when he truly said that the future of civilization is indissolubly bound up in the future of the United States—those other achievements, accomplished by the toleration, resolute strength, and love of justice of the statesman, when the sword of the soldier was Empire. During that time he has visited the Old World, breathed the Scotch air of his ancestors, and passed on from point to point of Queen

Victoria's dominions; and now, on leaving this Island and crossing the Pacific to his own home, he is about to part with that Empire, throughout the whole of which he has been received with one long ovation of respect and affection. As the Queen's representative, and in the name of every

Two years have gone since he first will ask you not to forget the charming lady at my right, and her family; for, within the last few minutes, a telegram has reached them from London, announcing the birth of a grand-child, so that General Grant, though still comparatively a young man, younger indeed to-day than was Washington when he first became President, has, as a grandfather, added another little link to unite the two countries together. I give you, with all my heart, the health of General Grant.

1.0 General Grant, in reply, said:—I am very grateful to you for your kind address, to which I would be happy to respond, but there is so much personal and flattering to myself that I find it impossible. It is only a continuance of the kindness that I have received not only in England, but in India, and in the British colonies; wherever, in fact, I have met Englishmen, I have met nothing but courtesy, hospitality, and good-will to myself and my country.

As you have said, I am about to leave the British and pass into the Chinese Empire. I have met no gentlemen so kind as the gentlemen of England. For this reception, more especially for the reception in Hongkong, I am grateful, as I know my friends and countrymen at home are grateful for the kindness that I have been honoured with during the last two years. I do not know that I can say anything better, nor anything which is nearer to my heart, now that I am leaving the British Empire, than to ask you all to unite in this sentiment: The perpetual friendship and alliance of the two great "English-speaking nations of the world—Eng-"land and America."

The General's toast was drunk by all the guests upstanding. Soon after, the ladies retired to the large drawing room, and at ten o'clock General Grant, the Governor, and the Aide-de-Camp, with Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Hennessy, proceeded to the vestibule, where every person, on arrival, was received and presented to the General by the Governor. These presentations lasted for more than an hour.

On the 12th of May, a deputation from the Chinese community, consisting of Messrs. No Choy, Leung On, Fung Tang, Hop Ki, Ho Ami, Li Shing, and Cheng Chin Yeung, waited upon General Grant at Government House, to present him with an address previous to his departure.

His Excellency the Governor introduced the deputation to General Grant, and the Honourable A. E. Borie, Colonel Mosby, and Major PALMER, A.D.C., were also present.

General Grant, replying, said:—Mr. No Choy and Gentlemen, I thank you for this valuable address. It will be kept by me as a pleasing memento of the Chinese community of Hongkong. In other Colonies during my recent travels I have

THE ADDRESS. (Translation read by Mr. Ng Choy).

by the carrying out of a just policy you com-

Foreigners alike, and the Chinese who have been trading in the United States have sung, and continue to sing, praises of the many good actions visit, we avail ourselves of the opportunity to present you with a scroll inscribed with these also met countrymen of yours, and I have found the rulers of those Colonies recognising your good qualities of frugality, industry, and enterprise. Such qualities go far to account for the prosperous condition in which I see you all here. I am now leaving Hongkong to visit your country, and I am sure I shall see much that will be very interesting to me. For this handsome address I must again thank you most sincerely, and I shall never forget the kindness shown to me by the people here. I wish that prosperity may continue to be enjoyed by you.

At the request of His Excellency the Governor, Mr. No Choy introduced the other members of the deputation to the General.

The deputation then withdrew.

The address, which was sixteen feet long by four feet wide, and extremely handsome, was embroidered in gold on a strip of crimson satin about ten feet long, with a rich deep border exquisitely embroidered. The characters are written in Chinese. On the top of the scroll is written the address, on the right side is General Grant's mame in Chinese, and on the opposite side are the signatures. In the centre are four large Chinese characters, viz.:一惠及華民("Wai Kap Wa Man" Benefit to Chinese people).
